MADISON REGATTA

Area event postponed until 2021

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

The 2020 Madison Regatta has become the latest casualty of the COVID-19 pandemic with Friday's announcement that both the APBA Gold Cup Unlimited hydroplane race and Roostertail Music Festival have been postponed to 2021.

The announcement was made late Friday afternoon in a statement released by the organization.

"Event organizers are all being faced with the same questions and unknowns as we are. Being on the (Indiana State Festivals Association) board has allowed me to expand my knowledge of other events around the state, and what they are facing," Madison Regatta President Matt True said. "Making this announcement to postpone the 70th anniversary of the Regatta raises feelings of disappointment and frustration, but it's all about safety first. We truly have to put our energy into 2021 planning, and we have the best team to do so."

County reaches agreement on two-mile buffer zone

BY COLLIN OVERTON

Jefferson County Commissioners accepted the city's recommendations for the two-mile buffer zone between the county, City of Madison and Town of Hanover with some added stipulations Thursday night after months of talk between the entities.

Jefferson County is currently being asked to remain in the buffer zone after the Commissions rescinded that ordinance at the end of 2019, following a year of debate and confusion from residents over which governmental body has jurisdiction and provides services within the two-mile zone around the city limits.

A joint committee of county and city officials presented five recommendations with hopes of resolving those issues on March 4, which included the county reversing its decision to leave the zone, amending city ordinances to ensure that a resident from the buffer zone always have a voting seat on the city's zoning appeals board and Jefferson County extracting the nuisance provisions from its own zoning ordinance and enforcing them as a separate ordinance.

Madison senior Kirby earns prestigious JAG scholarship

BY COLLIN OVERTON

The COVID-19 emergency may have put an abrupt end to Caroline Kirby's senior year, but it didn't stop her from being one of 23 students nationally to win a Kenneth Smith Scholarship through the Jobs for America's Graduates (JAG) program aimed at elevating high schoolers into higher education and the job market.

Like most seniors, Kirby had big plans for her final semester at Madison Consolidated High School. On top of prom, graduation, playing on the tennis team and serving as president of Madison's JAG program and She Became program, she had just won a regional award for Outstanding Senior at the Region 9 Conference at Hanover College on Jan. 23 and was looking forward to state competitions when the pandemic hit last month.

Now she'll submit her Outstanding Senior entry for the state competition digitally and finish out the year with online classes and no prom, sports or graduation — at least as originally planned.

Despite that, Kirby said Wednesday she still feels like she's gotten the most out of her high school experience and that her classmates have been understanding on why school was shut down.

"I think everyone's been really understanding, I think it's matured us too," she said. "I think it's been a good eye-opener for understanding how the world works — I feel like I definitely took for granted getting to see all my classmates every day and my teachers. We knew it was coming to an end but we didn't think it'd be so abrupt."

No matter the outcome of state finals later this year, Kirby's accomplishments have already payed off. The Outstanding Senior award from a conference in January placed her in the application pool for the prestigious Kenneth Smith Scholarship, which honors the cream of the crop in the nation's JAG programs and, in past years, has awarded students from $1,000-$2,000.

The scholarship is another impressive line on her resume. She will head to Hanover College next fall to study biochemistry with hopes to eventually become an optometrist after spending where first responders found and transported her to University of Cincinnati Medical Center where she died later from wounds sustained in the shooting.

Bailey's last known location was near the intersection of County Road 750 North and County Road 1000 West in Jefferson County. He resides on his family's property in the Commiskey area.

Police are still actively looking for Bailey. He is wanted on an active warrant for murder in Cincinnati and should be considered "armed and dangerous."

The Jefferson County Sheriff's Office, Madison Police Department, Cincinnati Police Department and the Ohio Valley Crime Suppression Task Force are actively searching for Bailey, a 2013 graduate of Madison Consolidated High School who is described as 5-foot-11 and 180 pounds with blue eyes and blond hair.

Sheriff's Deputies conducted a search of the Commiskey area for Bailey on Thursday with support by the Indiana State Police Aviation Unit.

Anyone with information on Bailey's location should contact law enforcement immediately. The contact number for the Cincinnati Police Department is 513-352-3542 and the number for the Jefferson County Central Dispatch is 812-265-2648.

the past year working part-time at the Eye Care Group on Clifty Drive. With health experts hinting at social distancing rules lasting the next few months, Kirby isn't sure how the pandemic will affect her plan, with her orientation set for the summer and classes in the fall.

After being accepted by 12 colleges, Kirby originally considered attending Indiana University Bloomington or Bellarmine, but chose Hanover to stay closer to home and hopefully make a difference here.

"I grew up here, and there are things I'd still like to do that aren't that far away. I'd like to come back next school year and help out with Mrs. Matthews in JAG and the She Became program and make sure that's going well from when we started this year," Kirby said. "... I'd like to be as much an asset to the community as I can, so Hanover would let me continue to do that, to do as much as I can."

As for her classmates, Kirby said most were upset with the way the school year ended, but understanding of the reasons. So far they are staying in touch before they go their separate ways in the fall.

"I think everybody's really doing a good job of making sure that they reach out and that we're not losing connection quite yet ... I think it's brought us together a little bit and made us value each other a little more. It's definitely made us value our teachers and how much work they're putting into our e-learning assignments and we're wishing we could be in class with them," Kirby said.

Kirby was most looking forward to senior prom this year, but with the end of the school year approaching, she's now more worried about the prospect of not getting to walk across the graduation stage.

Madison administrators have expressed hopes for hosting a graduation ceremony later in the summer if social gathering restrictions are relaxed, but it's hard to imagine what that would look like or when it would take place.

"Graduation's kind of becoming a big thing for me where I'm realizing the significance of it and the time and tradition of it ... with all this, Mr. [Michael] Gasaway and Madison Consolidated staff and faculty, I think they are really trying to keep us in mind and do what's best for us and make sure we do get what we need," Kirby said.

While the COVID shutdown has certainly altered her senior year, it's also "been a breath of fresh air," she said, allowing her to spend more time with her family at home and not be as split between school, extracurriculars, work and enjoying this time with family. It's also given her more time to apply for scholarships and reflect on her upbringing at Madison, which she thinks will make her appreciate a small school like Hanover.

"I'd like to give a big thank you to all of Madison staff, faculty, and all the kids we grew up with ... I think Hanover's going to be a good transition for me, from Madison to Hanover I think is going to be the same kind of environment where I look forward to getting to know everybody in that kind of medium-sized setting," Kirby said. "I had an awesome childhood growing up in the Madison schools and they've done a lot for me, and I couldn't have had a better experience out of it. And I'm only hoping to grow and do a little better and better myself at Hanover, and I think that's where it's going to be."

Jefferson COVID-19 cases now at 18

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Jefferson County saw its number of positive COVID-19 cases rise by three to bring its total number to 18 as of Friday morning.

Tammy Monroe, health administrator for Jefferson County, made that announcement during an online briefing with county officials and the media on Friday morning. A total of 340 patients have been tested in the county and there have been no reported deaths.

"I want to thank the Jefferson County community for all of the hard work. Everybody is doing a good job of staying at home or social distancing," Monroe said. "I would encourage everybody to stay at home unless you need to go out for an essential item or for work."

The COVID-19 clinic at Kings Daughters' Health has been doing 25 to 30 tests a day, according to Shane Williams, director of emergency services for KDH. Williams stressed that as the number of tests increase, so will the number of positive results.

"As we ramp up testing we are going to see new positives," Williams said. "There are more positive cases in the community without a doubt. We just ask everybody to be patient."

Dr. John Hossler, health officer for Jefferson County, confirmed that there have been several positive cases at the Indiana-Kentucky Electric Corporation power plant and said that the county has been in contact with management at the plant.

"It's something that we are keeping an eye on," Hossler said.

Monroe used the briefing to not only praise local residents for their adherence to the stay-at-home orders but also to stress the importance of wearing masks when they do venture out into public.

"Surgical masks are better than cloth masks but cloth masks are better than no mask," Monroe said.

Hossler echoed Monroe's comments about the importance of wearing masks.

"Sixty-five% of people with this virus are asymptomatic and there is just simply no way to test for that," Hossler said. "You can't tell if somebody has COVID by looking at them, you can't see it in their face. We've had local industries and business inquire about whether their employees should wear masks and we think that's probably for the best."

Of the five Indiana counties that border Jefferson County, only Switzerland County, with 12, has fewer reported cases of COVID-19 according to the Indiana State Department of Health. Clark is reporting 151 cases, Ripley has 77, Jennings has 63 and Scott has 20. There have been 10 reported deaths in Clark, three in Ripley and two in Scott but none in Jefferson, Switzerland or Jennings.

Overall in the state of Indiana, there have been 10,154 confirmed cases with a total of 519 deaths. A total of 54,785 tests have been administered.

Across the Ohio River, Carroll County is reporting two COVID-19 cases as of Friday morning and Trimble County has one according to the Kentucky Public Health department. Overall Kentucky has 2,429 cases and 129 confirmed deaths.

Jefferson County officials will hold their next COVID-19 briefing on Tuesday morning.

Commissioners President David Bramer brought the vote to Thursday's regular meeting, saying the county would accept the recommendations as long as a couple modifications were made in respect to residential-agricultural zones that residents had voiced concerned about throughout the negotiation process.

"The mayor has requested that we either tell him 'Yes, we're going to go with his recommendations' or 'No we're not,' " Bramer said.

"I believe in our discussions we've thought that we can go with him. We need to get our property maintenance ordinance that's currently under the zoning ordinance, get that pulled out and get that ready to go. So we're not quite ready with that just yet, but we've paused it till June, so we'll have it ready by then.

"We will have some discussion, I think, on some small parts in our ordinance and in their zoning ordinance which covers the two-mile buffer zone," Bramer continued. "So I think we can work that out, but he was just concerned that if we didn't take action now he was going to have to start a different path that probably we didn't want to go down."

Commissioners Robert Little and Ron Lee agreed to accept the proposal on the condition that the modifications are made.

"As long as we can get our modifications, yes," Little said, citing the need to work with the county Board of Zoning Appeals to get the smaller things smoothed out before finalizing the agreement.

Also during Thursday night's meeting, county Emergency Management Agency Director Troy Morgan said his department had to go through a private company in Clark County to purchase personal protection equipment for employees due to a national stockpile shortage. Morgan had ordered PPE from the Federal Emergency Management Agency through the Indiana Department of Homeland Security, but was notified that delivery would take several weeks before more supplies are available, he told commissioners.

However, Morgan was able to order PPEs from a Clark County company and Wednesday received shipment of 500 N95 masks and four boxes of gloves, with more orders on the way soon. Jefferson County EMA also received assistance from the Madison Chemical Company this week, which donated 12 quarts of industrial surface sanitizer.

Morgan also said the county's Emergency Operations Center, which was opened in response to the pandemic, has been helping out the health department and emergency services by staffing at an operational level an hour before the health department opens daily and staying an hour after they close. Status of the Operations Center remains at Level 4, the lowest level identified by IDHS, Morgan noted.

In other business at Thursday's meeting:

- The commission voted to move primary elections from May 5 to June 2 in line with the state's decision to move primaries to the same date and rescheduled the county's election holiday relative to the new date.
- Commissioners approved a $74,000 proposal to purchase a used tractor and side mower with 290 hours for the Jefferson County Highway Department. Highway Superintendent Bobby Phillips said the equipment will be put to good use in the coming months as the department begins mowing road ditches and gets ready for the summer season.
- Commissioner Little reported that no county employees have so far tested positive for COVID-19.

Custer contestants announced for online competition

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT

Like most events this spring, Madison's 109th Annual Custer Oratorical Contest set for April 25 will be done much differently this year due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

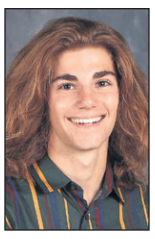
Started in 1912 by A.S. Custer, the public speaking competition has included the top five students in each Madison High School Class ever since and is traditionally done in front of a live audience. With with no live classes at school or events where more than 10 people can gather, that will change this year. Six students — there was a tie for fifth place — will submit entries for a social media audience with no judges deciding an overall winner and all six receiving equal scholarship money for qualifying.

Lyca Bishop

Isaac Boone

Jessie Dyer

Bailey Hankins



Elias Hanson

Jonah Nichols

Lyca Bishop, the daughter of Fely Bishop, will perform an excerpt from "The Great Gatsby" by F. Scott Fitzgerald and is coached by Lee Strassell. In her time at Madison, Bishop was involved in marching band, National Honor Society and Academic Super Bowl. She is undecided on where she'll attend college but plans to study psychology.

Isaac Boone, who was named the Lilly Endowment Community Scholar this year and will attend the college of his choice free of tuition, although he's also undecided on a school, will also participate. The son of Ann Kirkland and Steve Boone, Isaac was involved in marching band and Academic Bowl while at Madison, on top of being a Madison Performing Arts Foundation artist and member of the Cincinnati Youth Wind Ensemble. He hopes to continue pursuing music in college and study saxophone performance and music education. Boone is coached by Jill Koren and will perform an excerpt from "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer" by Mark Twain.

Jessie Dyer, daughter of Sandi Dyer, will perform an excerpt from "Where the Heart Is" by Billie Letts and is coached by Amanda Harsin. Dyer plans to attend Indiana University in the fall and major in business management. While at MCHS, she played basketball and soccer and was involved with NHS and Student Athletic Council.

Bailey Hankins, daughter of Beth Hankins and Mark Hankins, will perform a passage from "To Kill a Mockingbird" by Harper Lee. Hankins, who was involved in archery, Health Occupations Students of America and NHS in high school, on top of earning a medical assisting certificate from Ivy Tech community College, is coached by Jill Koren. She plans to attend the Galen College of Nursing to pursue becoming a nurse.

Elias Hanson, son of Jon and Lisa Hanson, is coached by Susan Olendorf and will perform "A Literary Nightmare" by Mark Twain. He plans to major in chemistry at Southern Adventist University in Collegedale, Tennessee, and throughout high school was involved in soccer, Math Bowl and Student Athletic Council.

Jonah Nichols, son of Jim and Tracey Nichols, is coached by Krista Lee and will perform "Fahrenheit 451" by Ray Bradbury. Nichols plans to attend Purdue University to study engineering and was involved in NHS, football and wrestling while at Madison.

Sheriff's office arrests man in connection with stray bullet

The Jefferson County Sheriff's Office arrested a local man for allegedly firing a rifle with the bullet accidentally striking a woman sitting inside a residence in the 4700 block of South Hanover Saluda Road Thursday, according to a release by Chief Deputy Josh Taylor.

The sheriff's office was notified of the incident on Thursday and met with 32-year-old Kristina Law at King's Daughters' Health to investigate. Upon investigating the incident, it was determined that Law wounded was visiting a residence at about 7 p.m. Thursday in the 4700 block of South Hanover Saluda Road in Jefferson County when she was struck by a bullet that had been fired from a rifle at a property east of the residence.

Upon further investigation, officers determined Charles J. Hutchason, 48, had fired the rifle and he was arrested for criminal recklessness, a Level 5 felony. The Jefferson County Sheriff's Office and Jefferson County Prosecutor's Office are reviewing the case to determine if additional charges will be filed.

Law was treated and released from the hospital with a non-life threating injury.

Indiana health chief Box optimistic on state's peak for coronavirus spread

BY TOM DAVIES
ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Indiana's health commissioner voiced some hopefulness Wednesday about the coronavirus outbreak spread throughout the state even as its death toll has grown by more than 300 people in the past two weeks.

Dr. Kristina Box also announced that 119 residents of long-term care facilities had died with COVID-19 illnesses, a steep jump from what state officials had previously reported.

Box said she was "cautiously optimistic" that steps such as the statewide stay-at-home order have slowed down the growth of COVID-19 infections and allowed Indiana hospitals to maintain their capacity to treat seriously ill patients.

"We may be seeing that peak flattened and that kind of plateauing effect," Box said during the governor's daily coronavirus briefing.

Box said earlier this week she expected the coronavirus illness peak to arrive in late April for the Indianapolis area and the first weeks of May for rest of the state.

Indiana's death toll from the coronavirus outbreak has nearly quadrupled since the beginning of April. State health officials on Wednesday reported 49 additional deaths.

The new COVID-19 death reports occurred between March 28 and Tuesday, increasing the state's total to 436 deaths, according to the Indiana State Department of Health. Agency statistics show that 111 coronavirus deaths had occurred through March 31.

Tests also confirmed 440 more COVID-19 illnesses, boosting Indiana's total number of cases to nearly 9,000.

Almost 90% of Indiana's deaths have been among people ages 60 and older as elderly people and those with serious health troubles living in nursing homes are among the most at-risk from COVID-19 infections.

The 119 deaths that Box said Wednesday were of people from long-term care and residential facilities represent 27% of the state's fatalities.

The state health department said Monday that at least 46 residents of 12 long-term care facilities in Indiana had died with coronavirus infections, including 22 patients from an Anderson nursing home.

The larger death tally comes from updated information that health officials have received since last week, the agency said.

"That's heartbreaking but it's unfortunately an expected disparity, knowing that these individuals in these facilities are our highest-risk population, based on their age and their chronic health conditions," Box said.

Unemployment claims mount in Kentucky

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Nearly 400,000 Kentucky residents have filed for unemployment benefits in the past four weeks as the coronavirus caused another round of massive layoffs in the state's battered economy.

A total of 115,763 Kentuckians filed unemployment claims last week, the U.S. Labor Department reported Thursday. That was down slightly from the prior week.

But in the past month, about 20% of the Bluegrass State's workforce has filed for unemployment.

Nationwide, roughly 22 million have sought jobless benefits in the past month — easily the worst stretch of U.S. job losses on record.

Like elsewhere around the country, Kentucky's unemployment benefit enrollment system has been overwhelmed by the skyrocketing numbers of applicants. Kentucky dramatically increased the number of employees handling unemployment insurance claims.

"We are processing more claims than ever before and sending out more payments than ever before," Gov. Andy Beshear said this week. "But I know that many of you out there still haven't gotten the service that you need. That is our fault and we are working through it."

After getting an infusion of federal funding, Kentucky recently started distributing an additional $600 per week for people receiving unemployment aid.

About 100 protesters bunched up outside the state Capitol on Wednesday to push back against Beshear's orders that closed a cross-section of businesses deemed nonessential in an effort to contain the virus's spread. The protesters could be heard chanting as the governor gave his daily update on the state's fight against the virus.

"I understand a couple dozen people who wanted to drown us out yesterday, but I think there are a whole lot of people out there who wanted the information we provided yesterday," Beshear said Thursday evening. "And for the families that we had to announce the loss of their loved ones, you know, screaming to drown that out isn't right. It just isn't right."

Beshear says his restrictions are working, noting that coronavirus cases in Kentucky are rising at a slower rate than most other states, even when adjusted for population size. The governor reported nearly 160 new coronavirus cases statewide Thursday and seven more virus-related deaths. The youngest new coronavirus patient was a 10-day-old baby in Lincoln County, Beshear said.

Beshear cautioned at his daily briefing Thursday that plans to reopen the economy will unfold in phases, and that "the new normal is going to be different than our old normal."

"We're going to be able to start coming out of this in ways that I know all of us have wanted to, but let's remember that until there's a vaccine we're still going to be doing some things very, very differently," he said. "And even in a phased approach, our seniors, the vulnerable populations are still going to be very, very at risk for this virus."

Most people who contract COVID-19 have mild or moderate symptoms, which can include fever and cough but also milder cases of pneumonia, sometimes requiring hospitalization. The risk of death is greater for older adults and people with other health problems.

EVENT

The Madison Regatta Board of Directors met last month to discuss the event and the coronavirus pandemic that has forced sports cancellations all over the globe. The opening race on the 2020 H1 Unlimited Hydroplane Series schedule, the Lake Guntersville Hydrofest, had already been canceled last month.

The Regatta board met on Wednesday to discuss its options, including postponing the event to a later date this year. In the end it was decided, in light of the unknowns surrounding the virus, that the decision to postpone to 2021 was the best option for everybody involved.

"The exact timing of when we will come out of this public health emergency is unknown so in following prior actions we have taken regarding festivals and events, it is prudent for the Madison Regatta Committee to take this step at this time," said Madison Mayor Bob Courtney. "Planning an event as significant as the Madison Regatta involves substantial investment and resources. There is no doubt that the long tradition of the Madison Regatta will continue into the future."

Both the race and the music festival will be rescheduled for next year's normal date, July 1-4. True said race and music fans who purchased 2020 tickets can expect an email indicating ticket transfer to the 2021 event dates. More information will be available in the coming weeks. Chairpersons for RVs, Tents, Vendors, and the other facilities will be reaching out to discuss 2021.

The Board of Directors would like to thank all of the Madison Regatta and Roostertail stakeholders, partners, sponsors, vendors, race teams and Visit Madison Inc. as well as the City of Madison for their support during this difficult time.

"I am very saddened to hear of the cancelled the sport's prestigious Gold Cup. "I can assure you that the Miss Madison racing team is looking forward to whatever the future may hold and we are set to continue our goals as an elite motorsports team. Madison, Indiana, is an important part to our success and we want to keep it that way by keeping everyone safe. I would like to personally thank the entire Madison Regatta staff for all their efforts in this trying time and we look forward to supporting Regatta in defense of our Gold Cup championship at a later time. Thank You. Better times are ahead for all of us."

OBITUARIES

David Furnish

David Earl Furnish, 62, of Madison, Indiana, died Monday, April 13, 2020, at the IU Health Methodist Hospital in Indianapolis, after a courageous battle with cancer.

He was born Feb. 24, 1958, in Madison, to Earl Wayne Furnish and Shirley L. Mills Hayden. He was raised in Switzerland and Ripley counties and graduated from South Ripley High School in 1977 where he played basketball and other sports. He was employed with the Indiana Department of Transportation for 40 years at the Versailles Unit where he was a foreman for several years. The past four years he served as a highway tech/inspector for the Seymour District working in the Vevay office. He lived in Versailles from 1980-2010 before moving to Bacon Ridge to live on the family farm. He liked playing church softball in his younger years for St. Anthony Catholic Church, was a long-time member of St. Magdalene Catholic Church and now the Prince of Peace Catholic Church. While living in Versailles he enjoyed coaching area youth as well as the Versailles DeMolay and later at Lide White Boys and Girls Club in Madison. He served on the Versailles Town Board for four years and held membership in the Versailles Masonic Lodge No. 7 F. & A.M. He was the family repairman, loved fishing, hunting and antiques.

Survivors include his father of Vevay; his wife of 40 years, Sherri Lynn Geyman Furnish, of Madison; a son, Bryce Furnish of Madison; a brother, Alan Furnish of Madison; his half sisters, Alicia Byard of Versailles and Debbie Bradley of French Lick, Indiana; and several aunts and uncles, step brothers and step sisters, nieces and nephews and cousins and other relatives.

He was preceded in death by his mother, his stepfather, Earl Hayden Jr.; his stepmother, Wanda Kennett Furnish; and several other family members.

Private graveside services will be at 1 p.m. Monday, April 20, at the St. Magdalene Cemetery in Madison with interment there. Private family visitation is 11 a.m. Monday until time of services at the Morgan & Nay Funeral Centre in Madison.

Due to the COVID-19 pandemic a Celebration of Life Memorial Visitation and Memorial Mass will be held at a later date.

Memorial contributions may be made to Canaan Volunteer Fire Department, the Saint Magdalene Catholic Cemetery Trust, the Prince of Peace Steeple for the People Fund or the IU Foundation for families suffering with cancer. Cards are available at the funeral home.

Area libraries try to help during quarantine

BY ELISABETH MOORE

As restaurants, stores and other locations remain closed due to the quarantine for COVID-19, area libraries have began to get creative in ways to include library goers in events that do not put them in harms way, mainly by finding ways to continue reading online.

Courier staff photos by Elisabeth Moore

The Jefferson County Public Library is one of the area libraries still offering services to the public, including online programing and events due to quarantine.

Windows at the Jefferson County Public Library ask those walking by to "Be Well."

While the area libraries are currently closed, many counties have free little libraries, like this one at Hargan-Matthews Park in Madison, located around town to help give free books to those who want to read.

Free little libraries, like this one at the Jefferson County Historical Society, are located around Jefferson County for those who want to pick up a free book to read.

JEFFERSON COUNTY

The Jefferson County Public Library is one of the local libraries still available to the public. Although the doors are currently closed, you can contact the staff by email at contact@mjcpl.org, through their Facebook page or through their new phone system at 812-265-2744, Jefferson County Library Director Judi Terpening said a majority of library programs and some events can now be accessed for free online.

Programs available include OverDrive, which offers e-books, audiobooks and magazines; Hoopla, which offers e-books, audiobooks, music, TV series and movies; and TumbleBooks, which offers books and programs for children and teens. To use these programs through the Jefferson County Public Library, patrons can log in using their library cards. If a person does not have a library card, Terpening said that for the first time, the library is offering online library card registrations through their website www.mjcpl.org

Terpening also said that other online resources include NoveList, a database to help find something to read; ReferenceUSA, a website that can help business startups and serve as a resource for conducting a reverse phone search; WordBook Online, which provides homework assignments and activities to do at home; and INspire, Indiana's virtual library.

Free wifi is available outside of the Madison library building and in the parking lot at the Hanover branch. For those without online access, there is a version of a free little library located on the front porch of the Madison library.

"The hardest thing to deal with has been not seeing our patrons face to face," Terpening said. "We have a personal connection with many of them. We miss seeing them, but we are glad that our efforts may help to keep them safe."

TRIMBLE COUNTY

At the Trimble County Public Library, Director Dena Ratliff said limited staff occupies the building between 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. to answer phones and emails while completing inventory and other projects. The library also offered curbside delivery for several weeks throughout March to allow patrons to put items on hold with staff delivering to the patrons' cars, but the library put that service on hold after Kentucky Gov. Steve Beshear issued an executive order suspended all services that are not essential. Ratliff said she is looking forward to implementing the service again once restrictions are lifted and it is safe to do so.

The online programs available through the Trimble County Public Library are part of the Kentucky Library Unbound, which can be used to access e-books, audio books and movies, and Hoopla. These programs can be accessed through a library card, which residents can sign up for by calling 802-255-7362. The library also has an interstate borrowing agreement with the Jefferson County Public Library, so people from Indiana can use the Trimble library services as well.

The Trimble library has two Little Free Library locations in Trimble County for those who want a physical book, one at the Bedford Community Center and the other located at the Milton Municipal Building. Ratliff said the library is currently working on adding others outside the Bedford Apartments and the Trimble County Public Library building to extend those services.

"I would encourage those who are homebound and are facing complications during this time to know that they are not alone," Ratliff said. "Many people are struggling during this time. Please reach out to a neighbor, a friend or give the library a call. We have been trying to check on our regular customers during this time ... Brighter days are ahead; we just need to keep encouraging one another."

SWITZERLAND COUNTY

The Switzerland County Public Library currently does not have consistent hours on when staff is in the building as many are working from home, but some still come in to check the phones and emails. Emily Fox, library director at Switzerland County Public Library, said the best way to reach the library is to message the staff on its Facebook page.

While no library materials are due during the closure, Fox said the library is also using OverDrive, TumbleBooks and the library just registered for Hoopla. Access for these programs can be done by using a library card and wifi is available in the library parking lot. Those who don't have a library card but live in Switzerland County, can sign up for a temporary library card at https://evergreen.lib.in.us/eg/opac/register.

ONLINE EVENTS

Although most of the area library events have been canceled, a few have created online events that the public can attend for free — generally live streamed on Facebook or available through each library's website.

The Jefferson County Public Library is hosting two Red Cross Blood Drives from noon to 5 p.m. on Thursday, April 23 and Thursday, May 7. The library is also offering an online drawing and painting class April 20, April 27, May 4, May 11, May 18 and May 25 from 6 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. led by instructor Russell Vossler, which will cover methods and techniques for drawing and painting and will be available on the Facebook group "JCPL On-line Drawing and Painting Class."

There will also be a Jefferson County Community Art Show, with the library partnering with Psi Iota Xi Sorority, to create an online art show on May 8 on the Jefferson County Community Art Show Facebook page. The deadline for submissions is Monday, May 4, and participants can submit a photo of their work to plpolley@gmail.com.

The Trimble County Public Library is also offering a variety of online events. A virtual book club is planned for 7 p.m. on Saturday, April 18, a Google workshop is at 1 p.m. and D&D Online at 3:30 p.m. on Monday, April 20. A Teen Book Club Discussion is at 4 p.m. at April 21, Earth Day Tree Giveaway at 9 a.m. and Virtual Story Hour at 10:40 a.m. on April 22, Teen Writing Book Camp at 4 p.m. on April 23, Online Trivia Night at 6 p.m. on April 24, D&D Online at 3:30 p.m. on April 27, Online Teen Book Club Discussion at 4 p.m. on April 28 and Virtual Story Hour at 10:30 a.m. on April 29. All events will be on the Trimble County Public Library Facebook page.

For those without internet, wifi will be available at the library 24/7 and at the Municipal Building in Milton between 8 a.m. and 9 p.m. The library is also working with Tri County Action Community Agency to deliver meals on Mondays to residents who are homebound.

The Switzerland County Public Library does not currently have any online events, but Fox said they plan to do some in the future. The library also plans to continue the annual summer reading program and will likely modify some of the events to be streamed online.

Outside of providing information and events to the public while under quarantine, Terpening said most of the staff have been working from home as much as possible. Some of the programs that used to be available in person at the library are now online, like answering genealogy and local history questions through email at localhistory@mjcpl.com or managing activities and programs online for all ages, Terpening said.

While the Trimble County Public Library is currently maintaining regular staff hours, most employees are focusing their work on inventory and cataloging projects while taking on new job responsibilities and helping with programming in some way, Ratliff said. Circulation desk clerks are helping create Lego building challenges, Code Club videos, Dungeons and Dragons club, story hour, nature walks, yoga programs and more. Ratliff said that for some staff members, the technology has been a steep learning curve but they have been rising to the challenge.

At the Switzerland County Public Library, staff members are currently working on making modifications to the summer reading program since so much of it has already been planned, said Fox. Other than that, they are organizing and going through the library's book collection to prepare for their annual book sale they hope to hold some time this summer. The genealogist is also still coming in a couple times a week to help answer any local history inquiries and many staff members are participating in trainings related to COVID-19, including how to handle library items that are returned during this time and how to reduce the spread of disease in the library.

"If people are bored at home, I definitely urge them to check our their local library's website and Facebook page," Fox said. "Many are sharing new content daily. Don't just stop at your local library either. Check out neighboring libraries or big library systems in large cities. It's sometimes difficult for small libraries with a small number of staff to do much, but the bigger library systems have the resources to produce a lot more new content and programming during the closure."

Let Us Pause to Honor the Memory of

Mr. David Earl Furnish

Mr. David Earl Furnish, age 62, of Madison, Indiana, entered this life on February 24, 1958 in Madison, Indiana. He was the loving son of Earl Wayne Furnish and Shirley L. Mills Hayden. He was raised in Switzerland and Ripley Counties. David graduated in 1977 from South Ripley High School where he enjoyed playing basketball and other sports. On April 12, 1980, David was united in marriage to Sherri Lynn Geyman at the St. Anthony Catholic Church in China. This happy union of 40 years was blessed with one son, Bryce. David was employed with the Indiana Department of Transportation for a total of forty years where he was a foreman for several years at the Versailles Unit. For the past four years he served as a highway tech/inspector for the Seymour District working in the Vevay office. He had attended many training and technical schools for his job and was most recently certified and licensed as an inspector. David and Sherri resided in Versailles from 1980-2010 then they moved to Bacon Ridge and lived on the family farm. David was a true family man, a devoted husband, loving dad, brother, uncle, son in law, brother in law, uncle and friend. He enjoyed attending his son's sporting events and coaching his teams. He liked playing church softball back in his younger years for St. Anthony Catholic Church. He was a long-time member of St. Magdalene Catholic Church and now the Prince of Peace Catholic Church. Let Us Pause to Honor the Memory of

Mrs. Eva Hambrick Hannah

Eva, age 88, had resided in Carmel, Indiana for the last 62 years. There she and her husband Bob raised their two daughters Lori and Lesi. Eva was active in her daughters' Girl Scout Troops and school PTO. She enjoyed supporting her church, Pleasant Grove United Methodist Church, by participating in the Women's Society fundraisers and the annual fish fry. Eva knew many Carmel residents from working at Kroger's for over 20 years. One of her favorite pastimes included playing bridge with her girlfriends. Eva passed away on April 14, 2020 at 4:25 a.m. at her home in Carmel, Indiana with her loving daughter at her side.

A LOVING FAMILY

Eva will be missed by her daughter Lori Berg and husband Mike of Lake Jackson Texas; her grandchildren Micole and Amir Hessami, Bobby and Alex Berg and Logan Tanner; son-in-law Blake Tanner; sister Joy Hambrick Sauley; nieces and nephews, Danny and Leslie Hambrick, Denise Coates, Tim and Kathy Sauley, and Brent Sauley. She was preceded in death by her husband Robert (Bob) Hannah, daughter Lesi Tanner, her parents Vernon and Aldean Hambrick, brother and his wife Thomas (Tom) and Ruth Hambrick, and brother-in-law Jerome (Jerry) Sauley.

PRIVATE SERVICES

A private family graveside ceremony will be held preceding Eva's interment next to her husband Bob and her parents at Grandview Memorial Gardens, located at 9306 N. U.S. 421 north of Madison, Indiana.

Health Inspections

The Jefferson County Health Department conducts quarterly inspections of all food establishments or locations that handle food in the county. Health inspections become public record 10 days after the inspection takes place.

The documents highlight critical, noncritical and repeated violations during each inspection or follow-up. Critical violations are listed. All records are supplied by the Jefferson County Health Department, which can be reached at 812-273-1942.

Arby's #1655: No violations.

Country Fresh Farms: No violations.

Hilltop Dairy Queen: Complaint — Customer complaint received stating that employees were not wearing gloves when she went through the drive thru. When I asked her what she ordered during her visit, she said that she only got milkshake-like drinks. During the inspection, the manager stated that his employees are educated on when they should be wearing gloves versus when they don't have to. According to the complaint, the staff wouldn't have needed to be wearing gloves with this particular order. The manager said that he would make sure that all employees were aware of current policies and procedures.

Kentucky Fried Chicken: Five non-critical.

Kroger #741: One critical (two containers of dill dip were found past their use-by date (3-10-2020) and are currently still available in the display cooler near the self checkout registers), two non-critical.

McDonalds: One critical (a working spray bottle was found near the three-basin sink without a label. The bottle had green liquid inside and a yellow nozzle), one non-critical.

Parkhurst — Underground: Two non-critical.

Pride Family Market Inc.: Two critical (An employee was observed placing gloves on before first washing their hands. The following food products were found past date and need to be discarded: 1. Kidney Bean Salad, located in the cooler direct across the hot holding window. 2. Several packages of meat found in the deli cooler in kitchen), two non-critical.

Speedway #5562: No violations.

Indiana woman's cartoon cutouts bring joy during time of unease

BY ASHLEY SLOBODA
THE JOURNAL GAZETTE

FORT WAYNE, IND.

Nancy Gouloff-Grabner's collection of plywood character cutouts weren't created for springtime.

Shrek and Donkey, Scooby-Doo and Shaggy, Tweedledee and Tweedledum, and Sven and Olaf instead were made to delight trick-or-treaters along West Sherwood Terrace amid a landscape of pumpkins and fallen leaves.

But as others began placing teddy bears in windows and rehanging Christmas lights to provide lightheartedness and hope during the coronavirus pandemic, Gouloff-Grabner knew her piled-up Halloween decorations also could provide a welcome reprieve.

As others began placing teddy bears in windows and rehanging Christmas lights to provide lightheartedness and hope during the coronavirus pandemic, Gouloff-Grabner knew her piled-up Halloween decorations also could provide a welcome reprieve.

Her neighbors agreed.

Various fictional characters — including those from "Shrek," "Scooby-Doo," "Alice in Wonderland" and "Frozen" — have found temporary homes in lawns near Foster Park.

"They're all out," Gouloff-Grabner said last week. "Everything I have is now scattered around the neighborhood."

Bev Zuber, the Wayne Township assessor, was thrilled to welcome the "Scooby-Doo" gang and their Mystery Machine to her yard. The decorations make for a natural photo op.

"It just brings happiness," Zuber said. "The kids come running up, and even adults have come running up."

Megan Chapla is now used to children checking daily on her house — er, yard — guests, Shrek and sidekick Donkey. She said she enjoys giving the kids something consistent to look forward to during this uncertain time.

"It's just been a ton of fun," Chapla said.

If she had had a choice, Tracy McMenimen said she would have picked "The Wizard of Oz" crew for her yard, but somebody got to those first. That's how she ended up with characters unfamiliar to her, those from "Despicable Me."

McMenimen encourages families to pause for a photo with Gru and his minions.

"It breaks up the day for the children," she said.

Gouloff-Grabner's character cutout tradition began about 13 years ago when her children — now 19, 22 and 24 — wanted to decorate for Halloween, and she had a 4-foot-by-8-foot piece of plywood to spare.

"I'm pretty handy with the jigsaw," she said.

Gouloff-Grabner sometimes draws the figures by hand, but she also uses a projector to get the shape and proportions right. Her sister, Jeanni Musgrave, has helped with painting, she added.

Some notable characters are missing from the wooden sets — such as Anna and Elsa from "Frozen" — because Gouloff-Grabner and her family dressed up as them for Halloween, she said.

Gouloff-Grabner's decision to pull the decorations out of storage has brought more than whimsy to the neighborhood as COVID-19 forces people to stay home, said Zuber, the resident hosting Scooby-Doo.

"I think it's a great illustration of the (468)07 community and how we stick together and will do this together. We'll get through it," Zuber said.

She described Gouloff-Grabner as the perfect instigator for the effort.

"When Nancy does something," Zuber said, "she does it well, down to the last detail."

No need to rush this

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: I am recently divorced with two young children. As soon as my divorce was finalized, I initiated a date with someone I'd known for years. We're still dating nine months later.

He is not really my type, but I asked him out because he makes me feel safe. He has been divorced for five years and is ready for a serious relationship. He has two kids and is more than happy to blend families someday. He is everything my ex is not: stable, organized, affectionate, mature, thoughtful and financially responsible. He loves me and cares for me and wants to be my "everything."

He is ready to integrate our lives, but I am torn — partly because I rely on alimony for a few more years and therefore need to keep things a secret, partly because I'm not sure I want that level of commitment ever again, but mostly because I am terrified to get that close to someone emotionally and risk getting hurt. I do love him, but I'm still not fully over my ex or healed from the divorce. I care about him, but I love my independence and don't want to rely on anyone again. He is not pressuring me to move forward right now, but I know soon he will want to know if I am in this for the long haul, which is a fair question. I have told him I'm not ready for the next steps, and I do think he's willing to wait awhile, but not for as long as I need him to. However, I'm afraid I'll regret it forever if I lose such a good man. Please help! — Torn

Dear Torn: Cliche but true: Good things come to those who wait. This man is not rushing you, so stop rushing yourself. Focus on today, and the future will unfold as it should. If it does get to a point where he's pushing for marriage and you're still not ready, then don't marry him. That little voice inside your head knows a lot more than you give it credit for.

In romance and in all things, always strive to act from a place of love, not fear.

Dear Annie: I, like many, am very worried about the COVID-19 pandemic. Not only will many people likely die, but many have lost their jobs and economic security. During times like these, I think one of the worst effects is the pervasive feeling of helplessness that can occur, so I am trying to do something to help. I am one of the lucky ones with a stable job that allows me to work from home. Not only am I not losing income, but I am saving money because I don't need to buy gas and I'm not going out. So I have decided to donate any money I save to a local food bank. It's not much, but it's not nothing, and if everyone working from home decided to donate their gas money to those in need, it could actually make a difference. — Doing What I Can

Dear Doing: Thank you for this call to empathy. Fred Rogers said: "When I was a boy and I would see scary things in the news, my mother would say to me, 'Look for the helpers. You will always find people who are helping.' " God bless you and all the helpers.

Blind to accomplishment

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: I am a 67-year-old male. I married for the first time when I was 34. All my friends had gotten married, and my wife-to-be was studying to be a doctor, and I knew that would make people look up to me. I came from a well-to-do family but had not achieved anything on my own. Also, I did not believe I could support a family, so it seemed the perfect match. Our marriage lasted 25 years, not because I was happy but because I just was too timid to leave. We raised three children together, and I stayed at home while my wife worked. I was miserable because I felt like I had never really grown up and led my own life. I wanted to leave but did not want to when the children were young. At least that was my excuse. When the youngest was 13, I started acting out with anger, yelling at the children and my wife. I just raised such a fuss all the time that my wife finally asked me to leave.

I met a young, pretty woman online, and one thing led to another. She ended up moving to my state, and we were married soon afterward. She brought her 7-year-old daughter with her. I knew in my heart that I did not want to be married again, and I absolutely knew that I did not want to be burdened with a child, but I did not have the courage to say no. I did try, but her tears stopped me cold. Now, five years later, she is the main breadwinner and is very successful in her work. I am a stay-at-home father who feels like a loser who has never grown up. Same old story.

My wife is not a bad person, and my first wife was not either. They are both fine people, but I never really loved either of them because I do not love myself. To commit in a relationship, one needs to know who they are and what they want out of life. I never have. I still have dreams of leaving my present family and embarking on a solo hiking trip on the Appalachian Trail or getting a job helping others, but I now feel like I am too old to do anything different with my life.

My wife does not have a clue that I am as discontent as I am. No one except my closet friend knows how I feel. I cannot imagine having the gumption to actually leave, and I do not want to hurt my wife and daughter, so I just suffer in silence. I keep hoping that I can find the courage to live my own life but am feeling like it is too late for me. What should I do? — Suffering in Silence.

Dear Suffering in Silence: It sounds like you are dealing with depression. I am sorry you are suffering but proud of you for writing this letter to break your silence. The first step to end your suffering is to go through it. You need to seek professional help from a therapist who can help you see why you repeat this cycle of unhappiness.

From the outside, raising three wonderful children, and now a fourth, sounds like a huge accomplishment. But you can have all the accomplishments in the world and not see them or appreciate them. To feel accomplished, you have to feel that you deserve to be happy. With low self-esteem, you don't feel you deserve happiness, and you instead self-sabotage or walk around miserable.

Find a good therapist, and heal yourself day by day. Hopefully, you will start to feel more confident in yourself and see all that you have accomplished in life.

The playing surface at Alumni Stadium on the campus of Hanover College is undergoing a face-lift this week by the Motz Group. The artificial surface, which was originally laid down by Motz in 2008, has been taken up and a new playing surface will be installed over the next few weeks. Hanover's field, which is the home to the school's football, lacrosse and track & field teams, has seen plenty of action in its 12 years of existence and was ready for replacement. The field was one of the few artificial surfaces in the area when it was installed, but is just one of many now. Carroll County High School installed a new artificial turf field several years ago and installation of Madison's new artificial surface is set to begin in a few weeks. Hanover's new field will be ready for football practice in the fall.

Colts could still be in QB market on draft weekend

BY MICHAEL MAROT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Philip Rivers, Jacoby Brissett and Chad Kelly all have one year left on their contracts.

Brian Hoyer, who was released last month, and Andrew Luck, who retired in August, still count against the Indianapolis salary cap this year.

And yet, despite being charged $56.5 million for five quarterbacks, the Colts may be looking for yet another one in next week's NFL draft.

"You know how we feel about this. We are always looking hard at the quarterbacks," coach Frank Reich said recently. "You identify one, two, three guys who you like, you think fit. There's no guarantee you'll get them because there are 31 other teams who can get them."

They may not have a choice.

After Luck's sudden retirement, Brissett took over as the starter for the second time in three years and struggled after injuring his left knee. The result: Indy finished 7-9 and missed the playoffs for the fourth time in five years.

Last month, the Colts re-calibrated by signing 38-year-old free agent Rivers, delegating Brissett the backup and releasing Hoyer.

So suddenly the Colts are staring at a 2021 roster that doesn't include a single quarterback — and without a first-round pick next week to land one.

Ballard and Reich haven't dropped any hints about what they intend to do with two second-round picks, Nos. 34 and 44 overall. Or whether they might consider moving back into the first-round — for the right price and right guy.

What they will do is study, game plan and likely land a quarterback with one of their seven picks.

"I think it is a good group and it has good depth at all levels," Ballard said during the league's annual scouting combine in February. "We all know that position usually gets pushed up, but I've talked about this before, you've got to be true to your evaluation. I think more mistakes are made when you push that position up."

If the Colts don't take a quarterback in the first two rounds, it may be because they're trying to improve the receiving corps.

Yes, Reich and Ballard still like T.Y. Hilton and Jack Doyle. Yes, they appreciate Zach Pascal's steady progression. And, yes, they expect Parris Campbell and Daurice Fountain to come back strong after injuries.

But the departures of tight end Eric Ebron and receiver Devin Funchess in free agency leave some holes. Plus, Hilton has struggled with injuries each of the past two seasons, turns 32 in August, and like the three quarterbacks is entering the final year of his contract.

Ballard prefers building through the draft but already has made some splashy moves this offseason.

In addition to signing Rivers, an eight-time Pro Bowler, he acquired star defensive tackle DeForest Buckner from the 49ers for the 13th overall selection next week and quickly signed Buckner to a lucrative contract extension.

Pacers' Oladipo revises routine amid shutdown

BY MICHAEL MAROT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

INDIANAPOLIS — Victor Oladipo was just rounding into form when the NBA season was suspended.

His expected increased playing time, his hopes of chasing a home playoff series and taking the Indiana Pacers on a deep postseason run went on hold — at least a few more weeks.

Now, 14 months after suffering a serious knee injury, he's back home in Miami again, away from teammates again, doing what he can to be ready when games resume.

"It hurt just because it took me a while to come back and then, obviously, this happens and now you miss more," Oladipo said Thusday on a conference call. "I was out there playing, going as best I can, as hard as I can. To say if I was 100% out there, I don't know if I could say that. I'm just going to try and do my best to get better and get stronger."

A year ago, the two-time All-Star Oladipo went home to rehab from surgery on a ruptured quad tendon in his right knee. The grueling recovery took a full year to make it back to NBA games and another month to start looking like his old self.

In his last five games, Oladipo averaged 18.6 points, 4.8 rebounds, 3.6 assists, 1.4 steals while shooting 47.1% from the field. His best game was his: 27 points on 9 of 16 shooting and 5 of 7 on 3-pointers with seven rebounds and four assists.

But even if the season restarts, the Pacers know they can't just hit the go switch. Oladipo must work his way back.

"I think we could adjust as we go but there will be some limitations," Pacers president of basketball operations Kevin Pritchard said Wednesday, noting 40 minutes per game would be too much. "We want to put a plan in place for Victor to come back. But you know me, we will err on the side of caution with Victor, and the long term, every day. We do that with of our players."

Bengals seek next leader, eye Burrow

BY JOE KAY
ASSOCIATED PRESS

CINCINNATI — In 2003, everything was in place for the Bengals to take a quarterback with the first overall draft pick.

Cincinnati was coming off a 2-14 season. Attendance was down. Jon Kitna was in his 30s. A new head coach — Marvin Lewis — wanted a franchise quarterback. A Heisman Trophy winner was available.

Carson Palmer from USC became the face of a forlorn franchise and made it relevant again, leading Cincinnati to the playoffs twice — both losses — before insisting he wanted out.

The Bengals hadn't won a playoff game since the 1990 season, one of the worst stretches of futility in NFL history.

The streak is intact as the Bengals get ready to repeat history with the first overall pick.

They're coming off a 2-14 season. Attendance is down. Andy Dalton is in his 30s. Second-year head coach Zac Taylor wants a franchise quarterback. A Heisman Trophy winner is available.

Hello, Joe Burrow.

It will be a shock if the Bengals trade the pick or take someone other than the LSU quarterback with Ohio roots. He's a good fit for Taylor's system and he'll spark interest — at least initially — in a fan base that's largely apathetic.

"We talk about the traits we look for in a quarterback: guys who elevate people around them, and guys who have a history of winning," Taylor said.

Check, and check. Burrow fills every requirement.

What comes next will be far more interesting in the Bengals' three days of drafting. Some questions in play as the rounds advance:

Dalton has one year left on his contract. While there was a thought the Bengals could trade him for a draft pick — which is Dalton's preference — that hasn't happened.

The Bengals are considering keeping Dalton to help groom a rookie quarterback in an unsettled offseason resulting from coronavirus precautions.

"That's one of the options you keep on the table for those very reasons," Taylor said.

The Bengals essentially bought themselves time by using the franchise tag on receiver A.J. Green, who wants a multi-year deal coming off two injury-shortened seasons. When Green was sidelined by toe and ankle injuries, the offense cratered. With many options available in the receiver class, the Bengals will consider taking one on the second day of the draft.

Even if he's around only one more season, Cincinnati is counting on Green to ease the quarterback transition.
